TO THE JANITOR

YOU who, as Winsome Winnie says,
Do "turn the building on and off."
Give ear, I pray thee, to my prayer.
It's interrupted by a cough.
It's good-natured on my personage.
Here's chattering on my aching feet;
Janitor, please, janitor,
Give us a tiny bit of heat!

We've lost the ice-man's friendship, for We have no use for him or his.
The ice he furnishes ain't half As cold as all my family is.
My wife and little ones weep half
That sounds like buckshot on the floor.
Please give us heat or, janitor,
We never will be warm some more!

Last night I lay awake and wept
To think that when the morning came I'd have to get me up and dressed And start once more the freezing game.
Each child is shivering like a leaf
Of poplar in a summer storm.
And now and then I see them crawl
Into the ice chest to get warm.

O janitor, hear now the curse
That shall be thine if thou dost not Give ear unto our freezing plaint
And make this flat all nice and hot.
May you through all eternity Sit on an iceberg stark and bare
The while a million pain leaf fans Keep stirring up the icy air!
—Baltimore American.

SMART MILLINERY.

Hats Are Smaller and Fit Closely to the Head Behind.

In direct contrast to the three-cornered hats which are so popular in Paris very narrow oblong hats are again making their appearance.

Toques are not so high as it was predicted they would be, although the jam pot crown is revived in the picture hats, which are of enormous dimensions.
Some smart models are in two or three shades of brown velvet and satin mixed.
The most incongruous mixture is seen in black beaver hats with a trimming of fine silk tulle.

All hats fit closely to the head behind, and the small hat or toque may be said to be universally becoming.
Some of the close fitting hats show ruchings of velvet glace silk or panne.

VELVET SAILOR HAT.

The all white hat promises to be as popular as ever.

A pretty flowered silk muslin in a black, white and green mixture was trimmed with a heavy flounce of coarse suzette, which lace formed the entire upper part of the corsage. This had a part band of black oriental satin, with two ends of the same inserted with lace motifs and a collar of guipure and black embroidery. This was very becoming with a big black hat.

The cut shows a velvet sailor hat having upturned sides. It is trimmed with a white band and two bunches of feathers. JUDIC CHOLLET.

Why Buggins
Didn't Go Home

"YOU'RE looking bad," said Saug-gins.

Buggins certainly did look bad. His eyes had large dark rings under them, his face was pale, and his left cheek was horribly swollen.

"Bad!" he snorted. "So would you look bad if you'd been through what I have."

"What's the trouble?"

"Well, I've had jumping neuralgia since 2 o'clock this morning, if that's what you want to know. But that's not the trouble. The trouble is that I've been walking about the streets with it since daylight."

"But the streets are no place for you," protested Sauggins, "if you have neuralgia. You ought to stay home."
"That's all you know about it," snarled Buggins. "Home's no place for me when I'm sick."

"Why, your wife used to be a trained nurse."

"Exactly. She can give me the best attention—from a medical standpoint.
She knows just what ought to be done and does it. But there the matter ends.
Sympathy's what I want, and that she won't give to any sick man. She says she wouldn't have been a good nurse if she hadn't got rid of her sympathy in the first year of her training. She is always well herself and can't appreciate what pain is. Go home? Not much!"—Philadelphia Press.

Tree Grows Horizontally.

At Shillfried, near Matzen, a holiday resort much patronized by the Viennese, there is a tree which has the most singular characteristic of growing horizontally over the ledge of a deep hollow. The tree is about ten years old, and two years since, as the result of a landslip, it fell into its present position, with its branches upward and downward, and so has grown ever since, flowering and leafing just as if the position were natural.

Disliked Perjury.

"Your age, please?" asked the district attorney.

"Twenty-nine years," was the lady's reply.

"And now, may it please the court, I ask that the witness be sworn."—Philadelphia North American.

Sympathy.
"Please, sir," begged the tramp, "I haven't had anything to eat since I left my mother's door."
"Neither have I," said the man with the woman's club wife, surreptitiously shuffling him a five.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Modest, Indeed.
"He seems to be a modest, unassum-ing man."
"He is. Why, he actually admits that he might not be able to run an automobile that he never saw."—New York Times.

A Disappearance.

The Monkey—Say, GI, have you seen my brother Bill?

The Giraffe—I saw him making faces at the lion yesterday, but he hasn't been seen since.—New York Evening Journal.

Will Even Up.
Beryl—Mrs. Heavywell wears so many diamonds at receptions that she is frightfully overdressed.

Sibyl—Well, she makes up for that in her décollete evening gowns.—Baltimore Herald.

Attention, Ye Golfers!

"Why do you always smoke that big pipe when you're golfing, Mr. Fudge?
I should imagine it would be in the way."

"I smoke it because I am a religious man."

"Where's the connection?"

"Well, whenever I fiddle badly, the pipe prevents me from opening my lips in swear words, and by the time I am able to remove it from my lips I've conquered the temptation."

The New Cult of Baccus.

Instead of dosing amemic children, or adults, either, with bottle after bottle of tinctures of iron, give your family fresh grapes in abundance for breakfast, to the exclusion of any other food; but a small quantity of the simplest require sufficient exercise in the open air between meals; serve in the evening grape marmalade, soufflé or float, all made with the least sugar possible, and after a few weeks of this regimen you will find red blood beginning to mantle the hitherto pale cheeks. But keep it up. The grape season is long. At the height of it, when you can buy a peck basket of fresh, bloomy Concord or Iveses for 20 cents even in the city, then set about preparing for winter and spring. Something far better and far more valuable than the common domestic wines or even those of commerce can be made from the few bushels you may feel yourself able to invest in if you have no vineyard.

Substitute this nutrient tonic, diluted as far as necessary, for patent medicines and other superfluous drugs; displace coffee and tea with it, even displace poor milk—and the grape juice made at home is cheaper than the cheapest; give it to anemic children when they cry for bread and butter between meals or fret for candies and cake at any time.

Try this new cult of Bacchus for the present year, at least, and I am persuaded that you will never forsake or turn away from it, says a Table Talk writer.

Virtue's Triumph.

"Truth crushed to earth will rise again."

"Yes, but by the time it's on its feet it'll be counted out by the lie that downed it."—New York World.

As It Sometimes Happens.

"But if you feel so miserable, why don't you remain in bed?"

"I can't. Our maid is indisposed today, and some one has to do the work."
—Chicago Post.

Really Dead.

"So Marie is engaged to an undertaker?"

"Yes; but, then, you know, she's really dead in love."—Philadelphia Bulletin.
